

Driving directions

We recommend using Google Maps which will plot a good route to Carsac-de-Gurson. Enter "Carsac de Gurson, 24610". The village is small; once you get here the the map and description below will help you find Chateau de Carsac.

From the North - A89, Montpon

The route from the A89 brings you through the neighbouring village of St Martin de Gurson. After St Martin, the road curves round and climbs a hill to Carsac, you will pass a vineyard on your left and see the church (and the back of the chateau!) ahead, the Mairie on your right. Just before the church, turn left down a small track. The entrance to Le Chalet and La Maison du Gardien is about 20m down the track on your right through green iron gates.

From Bergerac or St Foy le Grand

The route from Bergerac will bring you through the village of St Meard de Gurson, then along the D32, a pretty road that winds along a forested river valley. As you approach our village you'll see the ruined Chateau de Gurson ahead of you. Turn right at the crossroads signposted Carsac-de-Gurson. You'll see Chateau de Carsac and our neighbouring church on top of the hill. Follow the road up the hill to the village, you'll see our chateau on your right and the church ahead of you. Just after the church, turn right down a small track. The entrance to Le Chalet and La Maison du Gardien is about 20m down the track on your right through green iron gates.

From Villefranche de Longchat St Emilion

Coming from St Emilion (or if you take a scenic country route from Bordeaux), you'll pass through the nearby village of Villefranche de Lonchat before approaching Carsac-de-Gurson from the West. After Villefranche you'll follow the D32, passing the entrance to the Lac de Gurson, with the ruined Chateau de Gurson on your right. Turn left at the crossroads signposted Carsac-de-Gurson. Follow the road up the hill to the village, you'll see our chateau on your right and the church ahead of you. Just after the church, turn right down a small track. The entrance to Le Chalet and La Maison du Gardien is about 20m down the track on your right through green iron gates.
